Dear Mrs Chapman

The other day I put some letters I sent the daguerreotypes to Samuel Haughton (James's only son) who left Dublin on Saturday. I particularly requested him to deliver it immediately to you

Mrs Forbes has just called to ask me if I have heard from him, whether I sent it delivered safely from London — I have written to him again mentioning that it is most delicate you should get it soon, & as it is a delicate article (I did not say what it is) it would be well if you could get it into your own hands. I am annoyed by this delay, I hasten to assure you it is not through any fault of mine it has occurred. I would be glad of even so short an acknowledgment of the receipt. Believe

Ms.A.9.2.25,106

one of the young people would kindly write - and say what news we have since had from New York

In haste, Ever respectfully Yours

Richd Webb

Dublin, July 29. 1857.

Ms. A.9.2.25,106